Why

There is a strong need for children/teens who are affected by epilepsy to be able to take part in activities without the worries of what people would think if they have a seizure or of being excluded. At camp, they can make friends and bond with others who understand and share the same issues while participating in a wide range of exciting activities, including zip-lining, horseback riding, archery, art, boating, and more. All activities are done with safety accommodations in place.
